

WHERE THE TOMORROWS GO

BY MANOJ S. ABRAHAM ILLUSTRATED BY LIZ URSO

WHERE THE TOMORROWS GO

By Manoj S. Abraham

Illustrated by Liz Urso

First published in the United States in 2015 by Sennin Group LLC.

Text copyright © 2014 by Manoj S. Abraham

Illustrations copyright © 2014 by Elizabeth Urso

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced in any form without written permission from the publisher.

ISBN 978-0-9887965-7-7

Sennin Group LLC

www.senningroup.com

Dedicated to the memory of the four-legged friends who have passed on from this world
but never from my tomorrows.

Roxy
Tank
Goliath
Riker
Harley

This is Bella.

This is Gogo, Bella's dog.

Bella loved Gogo.
And Gogo loved Bella.

Bella and Gogo did everything together.
They would play fetch in the yard together,

watch the cars go by together,

eat together,

and sleep together.

At the end of each day, Bella would sit at her desk, turn to Gogo and ask, "What will we do tomorrow, Gogo?"

About the Author and Illustrator

Manoj S. Abraham grew up being very afraid of dogs. It wasn't until he met his wife, Kristen, that he overcame that fear. It was the lasting bond he formed with one of her dogs, Tank, a 185-pound Dogue de Bordeaux (French Mastiff), that changed the way he viewed dogs. Gogo, the dog in this book, was fashioned after Tank who passed away in 2010.

In 2012, Manoj released his first children's book, Sam's Three What-ifs. Along with his wife, Manoj lives in New Jersey with his son, Sam, daughter, Maya, and dog, a Dogue de Bordeaux named Sherpa.

Liz Urso is an illustrator and graphic designer based in New Jersey. She spends nearly all her free time working on her own designs in a variety of mediums - illustration, plush toys, and crafting. Liz sees being creative and making art as her 'therapy' and feels happiest when she completes a creative project. In her own words, "Making art makes me smile. Hopefully, as I begin to share more of it, it does the same for others."

Acknowledgements

Once again, I find myself without the words to fully convey my gratitude to the people who helped make this book possible. Mentioning their names here only begins to capture my gratitude. Hopefully, the words of my heart will do the rest. "Thank you" to these amazing souls:

My wife, Kristen, who tirelessly listens to me ramble on about my ideas and supports me no matter how crazy I sound at times.

My good friend, Brian Jacob, for convincing me to write this book, connecting me with Liz, and always pushing me to do more.

The following wonderful friends, for allowing me to use them as guinea pigs on early versions of the manuscript and giving me their honest feedback - Rachael Pontillo, Stephanie DePatie, Keri Miksza, Ani Arjune, Mei Linh La-Mui, and Trang Tran.

My new friend, Liz Urso, for being a joy to work with and bringing the characters of this book to life in a way that was more beautiful than I ever imagined possible.

My parents, Samuel and Mariamma Abraham, for everything they've done for me that allowed me to come this far.

Finally, my children, Sam and Maya, for the smiles, laughter, and love that have made me a better version of myself. I love you more than you will ever know.

Manoj S. Abraham
May 11, 2015

Bella is a little girl who adores Gogo, her pet dog. When she learns of Gogo's sudden passing, she experiences some difficult thoughts and emotions for the first time. With some help from her parents, Bella opens her mind and heart to discover the happiness that lies beyond grief.

