

Thaddeus Winters

Every Known Situation

The Antidote to Unbalanced Thinking

This book of knowledge was designed to help he who is without the ability to unravel GOD's intent for humanity, by teaching the importance of replacing foolish thoughts, a practice that was ordained in GOD's will.

Every known situation can be explained by identifying who the creator is, what situations happened, and what we can do to change such a problem.

This book of knowledge was designed to help he who is without the ability to unravel God's intent for humanity.

We believe that addressing our circumstances and situations in a rational manner, meaning head-on, allows us to counter our steps and motives so that, in the future, we might commence learning the importance of replacing foolish thoughts. This adjustment is critical, mainly because we believe that our foolish thoughts are made by Satan, which in my mind, is what caused the fall of mankind without the possibility of ever consuming or confirming a logical escape route for humanity.

Sympathetic Image theories of life

My educated analysis allows me to think in a way that tells me that my thoughts of consuming the evidence of change is a measure of my individual faith, with high hopes of one day proving logic by watching it take shape.

The first of these is seen with rationalizing eyes, pure thoughts of health, and hope for humanity.

(Acknowledgement)

Dear Lord, I thank You for giving me the admiration and tools needed for me to reach heights in wisdom that will surely help people to settle that which results in cultural differences because of individual greed and different religious uncertainties. Meanwhile, I would like to take a moment to acknowledge God's ability to make this logic a reality by creating both of my parents, for only God knows the pressures that come with the upbringing and growth and development of a child. I would also like to acknowledge those who have helped to put together this guideline for humanity's sake. I pray that our Lord and Savior will take a moment to bless he who is obedient to God's message, because he who seeks a change in life shall experience a change in thought that could open doors and replace foolish thoughts.

(Creator)

He who has mastered the craft of creating, God the Father, is our creator. He's Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending of every situation and circumstance thought of. We must realize that the lives we live are none other than God's will. For this reason, I believe that no matter what circumstances occur, we should realize that God had a plan for humanity: He created Satan to poison the minds of every culture into believing that God has abandoned us, without any hope that could change our livelihoods. However, he who has an open mind allows his brain to drift to a place that could provide an antidote, one that would surely cure all cultural differences.

(Satan's mistake that Caused the Fall of Mankind)

In my honest opinion, I would have to say that, in order for us to even have circumstances and situations, there had to be a reason for God to punish mankind. So what reasons could we say that has led this civilization astray, Satan's thoughts, because he would have never gotten kicked out of heaven, hypothetically speaking. We have to realize that God already knew the outcome of the situation, because He Himself is our creator. Therefore, I believe that, from the moment Satan decided he was going to teach the angels to praise him instead of God, Satan was kicked right out of heaven and sent right here, where we live today, but this time with a will. That's right; even Satan has a will, and we all know that his will for mankind is to manipulate and cause conflict between every culture that God has created and will ever create until the end of time.

So what can we do to stop the world from going through these avoidable situations and circumstances? We could teach different cultures the importance of replacing foolish thoughts. Consequently, in my honest opinion, this world would gradually change, because the thought of every culture coming together of one accord means that the battle between good and evil would be a mythical story told by authors who embrace telling stories about pain and suffering. In reality, we would have already won by deciding to use common sense and rational thinking, which would take us as far as our minds could ever imagine in this day and time.

(What I Wish For)

What I wish for—if you knew what I was wishing, then you could understand that, in order for us to keep peace, we must first learn to seek peace, with high hopes of knowing that peace within reveals itself.

Now that we know the cause of our transgressions, what can we do to prevent ourselves from continuing this process in the future? The replacement of foolish thoughts is the only way that we as individuals can eliminate our cultural differences.

(Foolish Thoughts)

In order for us to succeed in life, we have to realize that the foolish thoughts made by Satan while in heaven is what has caused every circumstance and situation that has ever happened in the present.

1. What are foolish thoughts?

Incomprehensible flaws that dwell within the brain, much like a virus, visualizing captivity within the soul in a way that is unexplained.

2. How do we overcome these thoughts?

By replacing these foolish thoughts, by subtracting negatively from actuality with modified proof of simplified equations that compel existence through positive thinking.

(Unexplained Guidance)

Unexplained guidance refers to pure thoughts that reflect God's way of thinking and dwell within the human mind. As the brain decides to shift, those who listen to that inner voice of reason will capture inspiration. Subsequently, each person will begin to change as the result of a reprogrammed mind. It is the rationalized, unexplained intelligence that identifies hope and simplifies faith in everybody's mind, the evidence of intellectual enthusiasm that forces an individual to choose best-case scenarios in any given situation by seeking and practicing these methods. In effect, unexplained guidance teaches individuals how to replace these foolish thoughts that Satan has caused in the beginning and move forward with renewed faith.

(Happiness)

Happiness is an extreme feeling of joy. It is the point in time at which God allows us to enjoy the fact of living, although life circumstances sometimes bring forth tragedy. We have to train and teach ourselves that happiness is an emotion that comes from within, resulting from everything that was ever created by the people in this world. We would have to say that it is of this unlawful and sinful world. So one of our main commitments in life, in my honest opinion, should be to hope that one day in this life we can come together as a people, so we can eliminate the need for money. In reality, the need for money is what has caused this world to bring forth danger in circumstantial environments that prevent modern-day warfare between all individuals.

(People)

People are citizens created by God. They are individuals born of two people from the privilege of exchanging bodily fluids by having sex, which in this lifetime prevents pregnancy. That process, through God's will, creates all people; this was God's sympathetic way of populating this sinful and unmerciful world, through His love and sinfulness for his unworthy creation.

(Modern-Day Technology)

Modern-day technology is based on individual projects invented by people. They are usually brought to life by networking with well-known commodity brokers who introduce these projects to television programs that are shown all over the world. This means that the programs are shown overseas to every culture in each culture's own language. We show these inventions to everybody who has ever watched a television. Unfortunately, we, as a people, out of our misled way of thinking, also created weapons of mass destruction, weapons selfishly made by those who are too afraid to settle humanity's unsympathetic differences by having a change of heart and replacing their foolish thoughts.

(The Antidotes in life that Solved all Cultural Differences by Accepting God's Masterpiece for Humanity)

I see a masterpiece in my mind, but now, with consequential thoughts. Over time, an outer-body experience has shown me the true design of God's intent: the breaking of dirt to form a man who is meant to live a life serving Him, but never reaches that point. Thus, he lives his life, then burns in hell.

(Citizens of the World)

In order for me to reach a sophisticated crowd, my intelligence level and qualifications must collectively interact with someone else's wisdom, knowledge, and understanding. So help me to help the world by having the self-motivation to one day help all life, all nations, all citizens of the world. Aren't we tired of killing our own people in warfare, no matter where we're from or whom we praise? The only thing that we really know for sure is the fact that we are here, separated because of greed and different religious beliefs; this existence should be the reason that the words common sense come into play. After all, what reasons would we have for fighting, when we could build even greater empires together? Then, everyone could survive. We could sit down and have discussions about anything concerning this unknown place we inhabit, better known as Earth. The only thing that would separate us, then, is the fact that we all look just a little bit different, and that shouldn't be too much of a problem that we couldn't easily adjust to.

(Desire to Change)

I believe that the word desire means to wish for or hope that in this life we can come together and form strategies involving communication with different nationalities, so that we could converse in ways that would reach those who are superior. But before this could ever happen, we would first have to face reality, and facing reality is a situation that had been bothering them to alter their personalities because of this life we live. Sorry to say, but we are faced with reality in a way that even the modern-day philosophers and scientists lack, in levels of knowledge that can only be explained by me. The deepest thoughts of peace are real evidence of a change in life. Indeed, God's intent for humanity provides blueprints for a method that would change cultural differences, with the end result being a better life. That's why I believe that, for me to even reach a place where I could think about the possibility of writing a book about changing the unbalanced situation of this world, I would first have to experience my own knowledge in order to overcome my own situations and shortcomings in life. So always remember to be open-minded when it comes to others' situations, because who knows? I might help a person who is on the verge of death. My words of encouragement might help a person to overcome anything, because I know that what I believe is what I believe, because my beliefs are what I really believe in. Could we even begin to imagine the possibilities of what this world would be like if we were to all learn the importance of living? Then we could all join hands as a people, not separated by color or religion, but joined together by faith with a hope that is greater than any philosophy ever written. For just a moment, could we imagine what it would feel like to love everybody the same? Could we imagine living a peaceful life, never arguing over foolishness or our complicated differences that are unexplained in most situations? Common sense should tell us that we are all different and that we are all entitled to make mistakes because of our differences. If we could learn to accept that, then we could all experience a feeling of peace that would change the nation, particularly with regard to warfare. Why is it that we fight over material things, when we could all share them together? We should all be able to trade without having to kill each other over something that, as a people, we all need in order to survive. We can take that which is bad and make it good. We can make a difference in all cultures, because of this life that we are so privileged to live. Could anyone explain to me how it is that one person could influence a nation into disliking another nation? In my honest opinion, I believe that one man's effort to change humanity heals a few, but a few men's efforts to change heal a nation.

(Life)

God's creation has caused every known situation that has ever reached the Earth's surface, whether it resulted in something that was good or bad to the world. Things mean everything; we have to realize that God makes no mistakes in any situation.

The person I become tomorrow is a reflection of the person I am today.

The thought of leaving this Earth is what makes me appreciate the fact of living, although we sometimes have identity crises, based on the thoughts we have in life. Unfortunately, if we never learn the real importance of who we are as individuals, the decisions we are faced with today will be only a fraction of what we will be faced with in the future—unless something unimaginable happens. That is unlikely to happen, so let us choose not our own ways of living, but learn to live as our inner voice leads us, into the state of a loving life, until we leave this land. I bear the deepest sympathy at the thought of having a world that was created equal. My deepest thoughts allow me to write in such a way that only the unique in mind can comprehend.

What treaties can we orchestrate together to ensure that this vision is brought to reality?

{If we citizens join together, we can change humanity, instead of continuing to live with selfish greed and religious conflicts.}

I feel that in life we make it, but if you get the chance to succeed then take it, even though we struggle and have to start from the basics. We learn from mistakes as we make them. One day we are going to shake them. Who knows what tomorrow might bring? We might wake up and do it, just like the dream. It might be a map that I could see and I could read. I don't want it to be a trap and never get to see success that is you, Lord, the reflection of a light that shines off a glare in our eyes. When we look in the mirror, is that you, Lord? When we are minutes away from death and suddenly the imaginable happens—a feeling of peace, a feeling of mercy, a feeling of thanks—that's the only evidence we have, because no matter who we are, what we did, who we kill, or why we steal, we all experience the same thrill. So again, I ask that you who know this manuscript eliminate that which results in a nationality default, without any hope of ever being disencumbered. What I dream for this world is that, one day, somehow, we will come together as a people, rather than live separated because of foolishness. I wish that everybody could come together and discuss what it is that we need to do to change these rules and cultural differences that result in a nationality crisis. I wish that we could all choose to want to change our unlawful motives and replace them with something positive, as we hope and strive for a plan to help us rebuild our national heritage as individuals. What is it that controls every man's train of thought? Individual greed is one, because everybody that I have ever come in contact with wishes that he or she could have more money, a better house with a nice car, someone to come home to, and so forth. That's not always the case, but that's just how some things go.

Common sense I believe that some people in this world would rather take than ever have to get up every morning with a reason to aim for a higher expectation in life. My deepest thoughts revolve around structured living, with all pains brought to the surface in an uncomfortable setting, through pain. I speak with a passion, visualizing hopes for tomorrow, as I borrow melodies from a masterpiece developed in my mind, with sincere tears for mankind. The concept of a common word believes in my own words. Have you ever had a reason to believe in anything? Be honest with yourself. Take a moment and think. Have we ever really believed in ourselves? I believe that the only way people can really reach their dreams is if they first believe not only in themselves, but in others. Also, sometimes the outsiders, who do not seem to be paying attention in some instances, are the ones who put forth real effort to help us by sharing their own ambitions for us and seeing talents that we are sometimes blind to. God's plan for our lives is written in our essence, but we have to reach the point where we feel that below-standard living is unacceptable. It's amazing how we can use simple words to express our innermost thoughts. Words that could unravel any situation, phrases that could convict any individual, theories that could change all nations' evidence: we could change this world with words. It takes only a few words to change everything. In order to stop fighting, we must use our words to form peace treaties. Peace requires words, but faith requires a strong-minded person to believe in something that is not seen with physical vision. So what would it take to rebuild a man of faith? First, learn how to empower pain. For example, anytime we feel the emotion of sadness, it is a form of pain. No matter the situation, if we could help rebuild faith by identifying pain, then my words could change humanity—not only my culture, but all cultural defaults. Then we could determine if my impact is as I expected.

(Ways of Escape)

In order for us to have a way of escape, we must first have hope. In order for us to have hope, we must first have a reason to hope. And what better way of hoping is there, than to follow a plan, which is the only design of a blueprint? Now with this blueprint, we must have a foundation; so, we must first build a foundation. When we reach this point, every section of the overall project is a challenge for the builder, because he has to measure every room individually, depending on the dimensions of the whole project. So, in order to change a man's train of thought, we must first distinguish his or her way of thinking. How do we do that? Separating our differences and realizing that we are not all the same is what confuses us most of the time. Even though there is more than one part to this Earth, we must realize that Earth is one place. So why would we want to mess up the one place where we as a people have to live? That's crazy! That doesn't make any real sense to me. Why would a man want to mess up the only place he has to live? Only a man who doesn't have a reason to live would act thusly; so once again, we're back to that one word: reason. We have a reason to live, and if that reason is to bring together all nations, then we could all prepare ourselves for peace on Earth and a better life. But we, as a people, are so caught up with selfishness, that we forget what is going on in the world. So take time to think about that. Think about the impact that it makes on us all. Think about those who have been killed because they chose not to have wars. Just think about eliminating God's creation from this Earth, which is also a sin.

(Developing a relationship with our Creator)

Before we can really live, we must first learn our reason for living, which in my opinion, is to praise God. But how can we learn about our creator if we have never desired to develop a relationship with Him? So I believe that God's way of living is the only way of living. We first have to realize that we are all born into sin. We should all realize that God knew from the beginning that we would all make mistakes, and we should all realize that, whatever decisions we make in this life, our almighty God can forgive and change them all, because of life itself. Just the thought of God creating a man from the dust of the ground makes me realize how much we really meant to Him, even then. Realizing that we are all made in the image of God tells me one thing: we had to be something very special to Him, because some infants never get to see this world. Some children die during childbirth. So, since God has spared my life, I try to take advantage of every moment and every reason for living. We have the breath of life and we have the willing mind to want to change. If this life I live doesn't line up with God's order, then how can we treat people the way that we would like them to treat us? The answer is simple: by not doing sinful things.

(Reasons)

Reasons are thoughts that are buried deep down within the human brain, and they can sometimes lead us into places that we couldn't even imagine. Our minds are so complex that the human brain can make us think about things that can have a major impact on other people's lives. Not only that, it can help lead us into places that will bring us down when, in actuality, we shouldn't feel that way. We have to realize that we are not all the same. Some people will allow their minds to think about anything, even though common sense should tell them to think in another way. But how do we do this? We must take time to appreciate life for what it really is and watch it bring about a change in our everyday lifestyle. We might reach a point in our lives where that's the only way we think. So look at the impact that such reasoning could have on all nationalities. Picture living a life stress-free, never wondering who was out to get you when you least expected it. We could all sleep better at night, raise our families, and live a worthwhile life until we are all called home where, even then, we would meet again. So who's to say that God, Jesus, or Buddha—whoever we were raised up praising—aren't absolutely the same, just in a different way? I believe that, until we can come together as one, this world will continue to be as it is, lost and confused. So take this message with the understanding that, no matter whom we praise, yes, I do believe.

(Change)

In a sense, I could be selfish by saying that I would just want a better life for my family and me, but why would I say that, when more people than just my family and me are living here on Earth? I believe that, in a sense, I had an unintentional disadvantage as a result of being adventurous, because my life has become very complicated. For example, just as we like to do wild and crazy things, sometimes we have to learn how to take that which is unlawful behavior and transfigure treacherous attacks while living a disorderly lifestyle meaning change. That is why I have the right to write; ever since I can remember, there has always been writing in my life. Look at it this way: If we get to write our own wills, why not write something that could help an individual to be open-minded about certain situations that could sometimes be avoided? If we pay attention to this life, then we might see that it is based upon how much pressure we can really handle, because certain kinds of people don't know how to do without. So, in this life, we have some people who would rather kill themselves than ever have to suffer. I believe that it should be one of our everyday jobs to uplift the next man, because who knows when we might need someone, even if it's only for some words of encouragement? So believe as if your life depended on it, but reach out and react in a way that identifies the characteristics of change in thought. Every culture could be united if we present this guideline; then hopefully, in the future, we will all be able to see life in a way that is unthought-of—not in a circumstantial way, but in a way that would open the eyes of all nations. It would take just a moment to listen to a message that could help to ensure a worthwhile conclusion that could identify forgiveness in a way that would most definitely change an individual's way of thinking. Forgiveness. Do we really know what forgiveness means? I don't really think we do, because if we did, then we would all be unselfish individuals who have decided to unclog captivity in an orderly fashion from the mind. But we hold grudges against one another for too long; this perpetrates hate, which brings forth anger. After it's all said and done, we sometimes wonder about the afterlife, because just the thought of eternal torment after living this privileged life, in my mind, really seems to be unfair in some cases. Just imagine if I'd spent my whole life in a jail cell because of something that I had no real dealings with; I was just at the wrong place at the wrong time. Sometimes, this creates a tragedy, which is still God's Will for our individual lives, because anything that's associated with life and living is God's Will, no matter what situations present themselves. That's why we must train and teach ourselves to appreciate the unimaginable possibilities of a better life, afterlife, so that we can spend life in a better state of mind, instead of wondering about it after it's all said and done. Common sense should tell us that, from the moment we are born until the day we depart this life, we think of reaching the point where we are financially, physically, and spiritually satisfied. This thought haunts us, while we live with a miserable hope of barely making it into heaven, because we already feel that we are not worthy because of our sins. Just admit it: life has its own way of unfolding, but we just have to realize it and come to a point in which we are tired of living the life that we once wanted to live. We must want to change, not to satisfy ourselves, but to influence God's way of living to a world that is lost and without hope due to individual greed and differences that we all face on a day-to-day basis. When it comes to living, we should train ourselves, and people of all nations should take time out to practice self-help, so that we can all be of one accord, which will make us stronger as a people, instead of separating ourselves out of selfishness.

(Preface)

The need for a change in the world is what inspired me to write this book. This book basically informs the world about contributions to the fall of mankind, and it offers guidelines that would help replace foolish thoughts.

Author: Thaddeus Winters

Poetry Is A Reflection of the Soul. Here are a couple of poems of enlightenment.

Will I Ever Make It Through

Will I ever make it through
These troublesome times?
Although life's lifeline
Seems approachable sometimes,
Because just the thought of negativity in the mind
Redefines purpose
By showing signs.
Which presents to life lies?
This in my mind is
The ability to despise mentally in the physical
Without spiritual tides
Which to some it is blinded
Because of its climate
And off-balanced timing
Which personifies tragedy

Wishing That The World

Wishing that the world could feel
The same way that I feel at this present moment
in time

We cry for physical blessing
Instead of looking for spiritual messages
That define
What it is that this world means in mind
Tremendous accomplishments
Although there's no real start point
Just a physical journey in thought
That is recorded
From the moment
That we are given a number
Not just any number
But a number that carries
Every situation that life brings
Every step has its own level of consequence
Although we still dream
As life sometimes seems
Like a curse
Because at some point in life
We all feel the emotion of hurt
Although we differ in birth
Which are unexplained categories and worst

