

The next cloud looked enormous like a monstrous giant whale.
In front of it he swore he saw a small boat setting sail.

And if he stared just hard enough the boat contained a toy.
A very frightened, rather naughty, little wooden boy.

As quickly as those clouds appeared they drifted clean away.
And in their place four others split the Sun's now fading rays...