

Entertainment for Parents

I've been signed up for many youth sports, to me it's all the same.
But it's a big deal for my parents, who have never missed a game.
So it's year-round sports for me, they expect I'll be a star.
And when we go to tournaments, no city is located too far.

They say it's to give me something to do, get some exercise.
But then why do they yell at refs? Does not seem very wise.
And seems to be costly, the best equipment money can buy.
I've been thinking about it, and I think finally figured out why.

As it began early, they first signed me up when I was five.
So it must be some other reason, a different internal drive.
It's not so I can get a scholarship, to make paying tuition less tough.
It's for entertainment for my parents! Who can't seem to get enough.
