

LilTop the baking dwarf is believed to be more than 700 years old by now. A small power pack of a guy, his donuts have more flavor than 20 full-size bakers, with just the right amount of attitude to go along with them. There is no bigger personality in the bakery than LilTop. People line up outside his bakery just to get a glimpse of him wielding the ingredients in his shop each morning. It's a strange thing to see because his bakery is located in the subway station. So, people are lined up all the way from the station to above the street at 148th Street and 7th in Harlem. He's a bit of a grump and is suspicious of absolutely everyone. You would think his staff would be other Dwarfs, but not at all. He likes working with regular-sized people. His donuts are unique because although they are bite-sized, they grow when you put them in your mouth. Most people just pop them into their mouths not knowing what to expect.

