

THE WASHINGTON AND THE COLUMBIA RIVERS
WAS A MAJOR SOURCE OF FISH FOR THE
INDIAN TRIBES OF THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST.
THE WASHINGTON AND THE COLUMBIA RIVERS
WAS A MAJOR SOURCE OF FISH FOR THE
INDIAN TRIBES OF THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST.

When the first white men came to the Pacific Northwest, they found a land of abundant natural resources. The Indians of the Pacific Northwest were fishing, hunting, and gathering. They were also trading with the Indians of the Pacific Northwest. They were also trading with the Indians of the Pacific Northwest.

When the first white men came to the Pacific Northwest, they found a land of abundant natural resources. The Indians of the Pacific Northwest were fishing, hunting, and gathering. They were also trading with the Indians of the Pacific Northwest. They were also trading with the Indians of the Pacific Northwest.

 NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC PUBLISHED BY
NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

THE WASHINGTON AND THE COLUMBIA RIVERS

THE WASHINGTON AND THE COLUMBIA RIVERS

THE MARKSMEN GUARD

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC