

What happens when socks don't come back from the wash?

Circus has lived his whole life afraid of the unknown. His entire existence has been a cycle of postulation and momentous testing. That was before he heard of his counterpart's disappearance.

To rescue his best friend, Circus must journey to a realm of sinister slave-traders, non-verbal riddles, and a carnival of exploding performers. With the help of a wash-bucket elder, the anxious sock devises a plan to retrieve his mate from the clutches of an evil circus master. But will the plan work? Will Circus save his sock or himself? Or will he suffer the same fate as all those who previously dared venture beyond the pipe?

In a race against the clock Circus must slip beyond his apprehensions and travel deep into the unknown.

The end of the living thread.

CRAIG FRIDEY

THE LIVING THREAD

This circus doesn't want you laughing,
but it does want you in stitches!

THE LIVING
THREAD

CRAIG FRIDEY